Abstract:

The program, "Pillars of Urban Sustainability," addresses the critical need for sustainable urban development in a rapidly changing world. Focusing on the interconnected pillars of environmental, social, and economic sustainability, the program aims to equip faculty and stakeholders with the knowledge and tools necessary to tackle contemporary urban challenges. It emphasizes the importance of mitigating climate change, promoting social equity and inclusion, and ensuring long-term economic viability in urban environments. The program seeks to foster a holistic approach to urban development by bringing together academicians, administrators, and policymakers. By exploring these three pillars, participants will gain a deeper understanding of how to create sustainable and resilient cities that benefit both present and future generations.

Key Takeaways:

The Program emphasises on

Environmental- Urban Climate and resources.

Social- promoting equity, inclusion, Heritage, and well-being.

Economic- responsible resource management, Long-term goal achievements and economic implications.
