"Infusing Health and Well-Being in Built Environments"

It is increasingly recognized that place and space have an impact on human health and wellbeing. Neighborhood characteristics and built environment features can have great impact on health and wellbeing. The built environment includes several material determinants as well as the social, economic and environmental conditions on which good health is dependent. On average, people spend around 90% of their time indoors and hence indoor environment to promote health becomes a very important aspect to deliver health and wellbeing.

This course intends to create awareness and understanding amongst Architects on various concepts, principles, standards and technology for design and creation of healthy habitats.

HIGHLIGHTS:

The participants will be introduced to the evidence based methodology as well as use of technology to determine the status of determinants of health and well-being of built environment.
